Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

Q1: What are the key differences between the Texas and the US Federal governments?

A1: The most significant difference lies in the executive branch. Texas employs a plural executive, distributing power among several independently elected officials, unlike the federal government's singular executive (the President). Furthermore, the Texas Constitution is considerably longer and more detailed than the US Constitution, reflecting a greater degree of legislative control over government operations. The structure of the judicial systems also differs, with Texas having a more complex and decentralized court structure.

Q2: How does the Texas Legislature differ from the US Congress?

A2: While both are bicameral, there are significant differences. The Texas Legislature has shorter sessions (140 days in regular sessions), limiting the amount of legislation that can be considered.
